

1000€ problems cannot be solved with 10€. The €1000 must first be earned or made available. When they are made available to you, you still don't know how the €1000 came about.

It's the same with the world. The possible combinations of the parts that make up the world are always more powerful than the finite texts I can write about them using a combination of finite characters.

And even if I combine the characters according to the right rules, the possible combinations will always be smaller than the possible combinations of the parts of the world.

I never know if I found the right solution. Because for that I would have to know the whole story in order to know the right initial conditions. The solutions must be tried. I can only be sure if the solution is wrong. All other solutions are only proven as long as they are not disproved.

Of course, it's also possible that the whole story will be given to me as a gift. Then I can only be grateful, but I can't pass on the story because I don't have the right starting conditions to work through it myself, and the story would at least be long enough for the possible combinations of its text symbols around the possible combinations of the parts of the whole world correspond to.

Only the world as a whole has this knowledge. And to prepare for the gift, all I can do is become still, pay attention to the moment and open myself to the awareness of the whole, maybe it will reveal itself.